

Fact Sheet

Overview:

Recognized for more than a century as the iconic address for Dallas hospitality, The Adolphus offers timeless culture, vibrant and storied surroundings, imaginative and collaborative food and drink, and locally celebrated amenities and experiences. Located in the heart of downtown Dallas, just steps from the lively and sophisticated city center, The Adolphus delivers intuitive, memorable service to its highly esteemed clientele.

Known as Dallas' first luxury hotel, The Adolphus personifies Texas hospitality. Since opening its doors in 1912, the luxury property has served as an icon of Dallas and an integral part of the city's history and culture. Situated on the original site of City Hall, The Adolphus was modeled after a beaux arts German castle and recently underwent an expansive restoration and renovation. The hotel features three room types, luxury suites, rooftop pool, full fitness center, Spa Adolphus and award-winning on-site dining options including The French Room and City Hall Bistro. The iconic luxury property, which recently turned 106, completed an extensive two-year renovation and restoration in Spring 2018. The design overhaul via local Swoon the Studio has made the property relevant to a new generation of bon vivants, all without sacrificing its majestic soul. Included in the property's restoration and redesign: City Hall Bistro, The French Room, The French Room Bar, and new openings: Spa Adolphus and rooftop pool, Commerce Retail Store which has a one-of-a-kind partnership with Stetson, Barber Shop (via Brass Tracks) and Viennese-inspired Otto's Coffee and Fine Foods.

Lobby Design:

Looking to turn The Adolphus into the downtown hotspot, Dallas-based SWOON created a true living lobby that fosters communal activity for guests and Dallas locals alike. Steel-frame factory windows were installed to define the zones of the lobby as rooms with distinct purpose and personality, without diminishing visibility or scale. Curated art, books and furnishings lend to the European-estate, yet residential feel. Two modern, stark black Richard Serra prints hang above two antique stone fireplaces imported from France – seamlessly juxtaposing new versus old world.

Spa Adolphus:

The 5,000 square-foot light-filled Spa Adolphus offers a crafted menu of treatments featured Red Flower's plant-based body products and organic fragrances, along with a quiet relaxation room with a patio overlooking the city.

Food & Beverage:

Otto's Coffee and Fine Foods: Otto's is a Viennese-style café perfect for a quick bite or leisurely coffee, along with grab-and-go meals, salads and sandwiches.

The French Room: The Adolphus ushers in a new era at The French Room to elevate the celebrated restaurant to its full potential, helmed by chef Anthony Dispensa who will oversee the culinary programs at The French Room. Dispensa's vision for The French Room is intuitive, guest-centric, contemporary and approachable. Dispensa is reinterpreting the ingredients and techniques used at the restaurant to create a modernized selection of French Room classics along with new dishes that reflect his own culinary perspective. The award-winning Dallas restaurant has been thoughtfully restored, yet carefully maintains the timeless atmosphere that exemplifies grand European architecture and design. Dining experiences are warm and memorable, with engaged, knowledgeable service punctuated by moments of unexpected delight in fine dining.

The French Room Bar: The French Room Bar is one of Dallas' most elegant bars, offering cocktails, fine wines and modern French bistro cuisine created by The French Room chef.

City Hall Bar: Located in the lobby, the bar offers a lively space for working and socializing, along with light bites, coffee and in the evening, beer, wine and cocktails.

City Hall Bistro: Open for breakfast, lunch and dinner, the bistro features a menu of Southern European-Inspired cuisine in a sleek space.

Overview:

The French Room has remained an icon of Dallas' highest standard of fine dining for over a century, seamlessly blending the extravagance of classic French cuisine with cutting edge culinary techniques to create sublime dining experiences since opening in 1912. Residing inside The Adolphus Hotel, this enduring classic maintains service standards harkening back to the golden era of fine dining, adorned with a thoughtful recreation of classic European architecture and design, reinvigorated to please the modern palate. The French Room offers an ever-changing menu of delightfully prepared classics brought into exquisite harmony with an extensive collection of European wines and tasteful cocktails provided by the adjoining French Room Bar and Salon.

The French Room Bar:

A sultry and elegant hideaway, The French Room Bar features artisanal cocktails and a menu of elevated classics and sharable plates by The French Room chef, Michael Ehlert. Antique portraits adorn the navy lacquered walls, while custom-made chairs, barstools and banquettes beckon patrons to stay awhile. An original fireplace, with a new red finish, serves as the focal point.

The French Room Salon: The adjoining salon is an art gallery in its own right. Thoughtfully curated by The Nasher's Lucia Simek, the space is filled with contemporary pieces from Texan artists.

Design:

Candle-white Venetian walls are complemented by several design elements familiar to the original space – including a honed marble floor, gilded Louis XVI style chairs reupholstered in subtly luxe fabrics, ornate sconces and candy-colored twin Italian Murano Glass chandeliers. The angelic crest found on the menu pays homage to the illustrations that once graced The French Room's walls.

Dress: Dress code for The French Room is business casual. For gentlemen, jackets are recommended.

CITY HALL
BISTRO

Overview:

A bright and buzzing local bistro of southern European-inspired cuisine featuring house-made breads and pastries, grain and vegetable salads, wood-roasted vegetables, fresh fish and aromatic braised meats. The convivial menu of shared plates by Louisiana native, chef Jeramie Robison, is complemented by a robust wine list (including quartino options) and menu of beautifully balanced cocktails.

Born over a century after the historic hotel's inauguration, this bright and sophisticated all-day eatery pays homage to the hotel's 1321 Commerce Street location, originally intended for Dallas' City Hall.

City Hall Bistro is set in a thoughtfully designed, detail-rich space that includes a vibrant brass-trimmed open kitchen, warm wood and marble surfaces, and compelling modern art.

Overview:

Otto's Coffee & Fine Foods is a Viennese-inspired café, in partnership with Oak Cliff Coffee Roasters, offering a unique-to-market concept for European-inspired coffee and fine foods in Downtown Dallas. Named after Otto Schubert, the charismatic general manager of The Adolphus from 1928 to 1946, Otto's features an old-world coffee experience in a handsome and inviting space where guests and locals alike can stop in for breakfast, grab a quick lunch or linger over a leisurely coffee. Inside the shop, a simple yet sophisticated pastry program anchors the breakfast menu, with a selection of house made items like bagels, pain au chocolat, almond croissants and various sweet breads. Additional offerings include fresh breakfast sandwiches, quiche Lorraine, steel cut oats, chia seed and acai puddings, and more. Lunch focuses on simple, artisanal offerings, such as European-style baguette sandwiches as well as a variety of grain and green salads along with a special selection of traditional Viennese treats and sweets, such as sachertorte, Linzter torte and apple strudel. Perhaps the most unique element of Otto's is the concept's outdoor walk-up window, serving handheld Liege waffles with a house made compote, and coffee.
